Excerpt: . . . fact, though it tends to prove the close relationship, if not the absolute identity of the diseases, does not prove that they both originated in the horse; but it strongly confirms the views of the simultaneous origin of the affections in question. It seems certain that there are, at least, four animals, namely, the horse, the sheep and the goat, which are affected with a disorder communicable to man; and capable of securing him from what appears to be a malignant form of the disease. It has, moreover, been proved by direct experiment, that other animals are capable of receiving the vaccine disease by inoculation; and that matter taken from pustules so produced affords the genuine cow-pox in man. These animals on which these experiments have been tried are the dog, the goat, the she-ass, and the sheep. The fact with regards to the...
