The masters against him on one hand, the men against him cn the other, he only wantin to work hard in peace, and do what he felt right. Can a man have no soul of his own, no mind of his own? Must he go wrong all through wi this side, or must he go wrong all through wi that, or else be hunted like a hare? Indeed, indeed, I pity him from my heart, returned Louisa; and I hope that he will clear himself. You need have no fear of it, young lady. He is sure! All the surer, I suppose, said Mr. Bounderby, for your refusing to tell where he is? Eh, lass? He shall not, through any act of mine, come back wi the unmerited reproach of being brought back. He shall come back of his own accord to clear himself, and put all those that have injured his good character, and he not here for its defense, to shame. I hare told him what has been done against him, said Kachael, throwing off all distrust as a rock throws off the sea, and he will be here, at furthest, in two days. Notwithstanding which, added Mr. Bounderby, if he can be laid hold of sooner, he shall have an earlier opportunity of clearing himself. As to you, I have nothing against you; what you came and told me turns out to be true,...
